Informal Invitation Sent To European Powers To Unite
Immediately By Russia

Berlin, March 18.—(INS)—After backing up her decision openly to rebuild the Reich army with the greatest military demonstration since the World War, Germany, while awaiting the next move of her former enemies, informed the world today that she is now in a position to talk "real" disarmament.

"Now that Germany has looked facts in the face and assumed a defensive equality," said the German foreign office, through its official organ, "Diplomatic Correspondence," "We are ready to negotiate a real limitation of armaments with other nations on the basis of equality."

It probably is this stand that Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler will put before Sir John Simon, British Foreign Minister, on his scheduled visit to Berlin one week from today—a visit that now stands out as the most important since Viscount Halifax's mission failed in 1912, leading to the great pre-war arms race.

Russia Sends Invitation
Moscow, March 18.—(INS)—An informal invitation to all European powers to unite immediately in "mutual guarantees of safety" in answer to the rearmament of Germany was extended by Soviet Russia today through the government newspaper "Izvestia."

A similar article appeared in Pravda, organ of the Communist party, and both attacked the "undoubted" military designs of a Germany freed by her own actions from the shackles of the Versailles Treaty.

"Romeo and Juliet" Brings
Famous Characters To Life
In Opening Of Guignol Play

By DAVE SALYERS

With a brilliance and a finish that made the famous characters of a famous play come delightfully to life on the stage, the Guignol theatre last night opened a week's presentation of Shakespeare's immortal "Romeo and Juliet," as its fifth production of the season.

Perhaps the most outstanding features of the production were the perfect smoothness with which it moved along and the clear diction of the characters, who rolled the ecstatic Shakespearean verse off their tongues with such ability that it appeared to be modern lingo. This served also to enhance the perfect naturalness of the characters and the motivation of the plot. The scenery and costumes also were excellent, providing the proper atmosphere for the intensely dramatic scenes. The last set, the tomb of Juliet, is one of the most beautiful ever seen on a Guignol stage.

The story deals with the feud between two prominent families of Verona, the Montagues and the Capulets. Romeo, a Montague, while attending a masquerade given by the Capulets, sees Juliet, a Capulet, and immediately falls deeply in love with her. He is forced to leave the party hastily when Tybalt, a Capulet, discovers him. Later that night, as Romeo strolls through the streets, he is attracted by a beautiful figure standing on a balcony and finds it to be his dear Juliet. He listens while she talks to the stars and hears her profess her love for him. He then comes from his hiding place and expresses to her his feelings. They plan to meet the next day at the house of Friar Lawrence to be married. They successfully carry out the plan and are secretly married by the Friar.

However, succeeding events, such as Romeo's banishment from Verona for the murder of Tybalt and the desires of Juliet's parents concerning a proper mate for her, lead to tragedy. Juliet's parents demand that she marry Paris, a prominent nobleman of Verona. To prevent this, she secures from the Friar a vial of fluid which will make her appear dead and thus they find her on her wedding morning. She is laid in a vault. Romeo, hearing of this, comes to the vault. Here he meets Paris, they fight, and Romeo is victorious. Then, in his sorrow, (Continued on Page Four)

Artistic Program
Is Presented By
Ideler, Anderson

Program of Next Sunday Is
Last of Twenty Scheduled for Season

Edwin Ideler, violinist, and Dwight Anderson, pianist, who were presented in concert Sunday afternoon in Memorial hall, gave one of the most artistic programs that has been given in the series of Sunday afternoon musicals this year. R. D. McIntyre, chairman of the music committee, announced that the concert of Sunday, March 24, will be the final of the 20 concerts scheduled for this season.

The program Sunday afternoon was unusually long. The Brahms Sonata in D Minor, Opus 108, and Cesar Franck's Sonata for violin and piano were the most interesting of the numbers played. Particularly the latter part of the second number gave an excellent opportunity for the players' accompaniment.

Mr. Anderson's solos consisted of Schubert's "Impromptu in E Flat, Opus 90, No. 2," "Etude in F Minor" by Liszt, and "Rhapsodie in E Flat" Opus 118, No. 4, by Brahms. Each of these numbers were played brilliantly and gave the artist the full benefit of his excellent ability. Mr. Anderson played with clearness and perfection of tone and in a style of his own.

For his part of the program, Mr. Ideler gave a group of Kreisler and Brahms and Bach selections from which the beautiful "Arioso" by Bach, to the charming "Hungarian Dance" by Brahms were played delightfully.

St. Xavier, of Louisville,
Downs Newport High, 32-18
To Capture Basketball Title

St. Xavier high school of Louisville emerged victorious in the 17th annual state high school basketball tournament, by outscoring Newport High, 32-18, in the finals held Saturday night in the Alumni gym. Newport and St. Xavier won their way to the last round by defeating Danville and Inez, respectively, in the semi-finals on Saturday afternoon.

It was the first time since 1926 that St. Xavier has won the title, and the second time that a Louisville team has won in nine years. The newly crowned champs are entered in the national Catholic championships at Chicago and face St. Benedict's high school Thursday.

At the conclusion of the tourney, the all-tournament team selected by the sports writers and officials, was announced by Coach Adolph Rupp. The following players were chosen: Reverman of St. Xavier, Howe and Ford of Newport, forwards; Blanford of St. Xavier, and Cundiff of Danville, centers; Sloane of Inez, Nolan of Maysville, and Magruder of St. Xavier, guards.

Reverman was the only unanimous choice and was selected as captain. Blanford was named the most valuable player of the tourney.

Before the final game got underway, most of the experts regarded the contest as a toss-up. In the first period, the Newport team played their best ball, holding the Tigers to but three points while they scored two field goals to lead 4-3 at the end of the quarter. The Tigers came back strongly in the next canto to take a lead which they never relinquished. St. Xavier was out in front, 10-5, at the end of the first half. In the final two periods, the Louisville team continued its furious pace to lengthen its lead and put the game on ice.

It was the fine play of Blanford and Reverman, who led the attack, aided by Magruder, Filburn and Lally, that decided the tilt for the Tigers. Blanford, a tall, gangling boy with a pair of big hands, gave one of the best exhibitions of pivot playing that has been seen in the high school tournaments in recent years. His ability to recover the ball from both backboards, his accurate passing and coolness, were outstanding factors in the triumph of the Louisville team.

IRISH SONGS FEATURED

Coach Bob Schumann and his 1935 state basketball champions, St. Xavier, were the guests of honor at a St. Patrick's Day breakfast given Sunday morning at the Lafayette hotel by the Catholic club of the University of Kentucky and Transylvania College.

More than 200 attended the breakfast meeting of the club at which each member of the St. Xavier team was introduced, and short talks were made by Coach Schumann, Captain Charles Lally, and Brothers Carl and Raymond, St. Xavier faculty members who accompanied the team to Lexington.

Thomas Mooney, Lexington attorney, was the principal speaker on the program, speaking on "St. Patrick, His History." Father George O'Bryan also was a speaker on the program. Miss Jimmie E. Lyons, accompanied by Miss Mary Sallee, sang several Irish folk songs. The St. Catherine Academy orchestra furnished music for the breakfast.

Brother Carl, prefect of study at St. Xavier, in his brief remarks, complimented the University department of extension for its cooperation with the high schools of Kentucky.

Robert Maloney, president of the club, acted as toastmaster at the breakfast and introduced the speakers.

The St. Xavier party present at the breakfast included, besides Brothers Carl and Raymond, Coach Schumann and Captain Lally, Tommy Filburn, Danny Weber, Dan Magruder, Harry Blanford, Gene Hauppman, Norbert Ackerman, Phil Reverman, and Manager Richard Marchand.

The cups won by the team, which besides the championship cup includes the cup won by Harry Blanford, voted the most valuable man in the tournament which closed Saturday night, were displayed at the speakers table.

AGE IS NO DRAWBACK

Venice, Cal., March 18.—(INS)—In recent years Mrs. Anna Van Skike, now 75, celebrated her birthdays by swimming a mile in the rough ocean between Venice and Santa Monica. But this year she altered the celebration. Today she had completed her six-day mid-winter swim. For six consecutive days she swam five miles, making a total of 30 miles for the event.

WHEN IT'S SPRINGTIME IN THE
RENDEZVOUS-BOTANICAL GARDEN

With the coming of spring one is desirous of seeing the beauty spots of the campus. The most interesting spot—especially on a starry night—is the Botanical gardens behind the Art Center. Here the reflection of the sun, moon, and stars can be seen—depending on the time of day—in a unique fish pond partly covered with lilies. Beautiful shrubs, trees, and flowers surround this small amphitheatre, and the restful attitude and beauty invites one to sit and dream for a while.

The next best place for quiet, peace, and serenity is the Garden behind White hall. Lately its peacefulness has been interrupted by the work of steam shovels and tractors, but now one may sit and enjoy its natural beauty. Here are found varieties of flowers and shrubs unequalled in splendor.

Looking across the way, one will see boys in shorts running, jumping, hurdlings, and playing football, but this only adds to your feeling of peace and rest.

Coming on across the campus, one enters the quadrangle, with the old heating plant's tall, stately, vine-covered smoke stack, a marker on the grounds for many years. Last summer in this spot, a statue of President Patterson was placed and dedicated, and now most any time of day one sees a group sitting around studying, talking, or laughing. Walking across in front of the Science building, one comes upon the dahlia garden, presented to the College of Engineering by Darrel W. Hart. In the summer, a profusion of large pink and white dahlias make this one of the most beautiful spots on the campus.

Gov. Ruby Laffoon Sends Letter Along With Application To Washington

Major B. E. Brewer, commandant of the University R.O.T.C. unit, announced yesterday that application had been filed with the War Department at Washington to obtain a Cavalry unit for the University. As yet no official action has been taken, but it is hoped that the application will be successful.

Pres. Frank L. McVey signed the application and a letter from Governor Laffoon was also included in the petition to the nation's capital. A number of prominent Lexington business men and equestrians have expressed their hearty approval and cooperation with the movement.

The proposed Cavalry unit would enable courses in equitation to be offered for students and faculty in addition to a full year course in cavalry service to supplement the present infantry training. Kentucky and especially the Blue Grass region probably is one of the best locations in the nation for such a unit, Major Brewer said, because it is situated in the heart of the horse raising industry and the climate is favorable for year-round training.

Major Brewer is confident that the cavalry military courses would be of great value to the University, as a "Snow unit" similar to the famous Black Horse Troop at Culver could be developed here, and a large sum of money would be spent here by the Government installing and in the upkeep of the stables and horses. In addition, a polo team would probably be organized which would represent the University in intercollegiate matches.

SINGING SPREE

The All-Campus Sing, sponsored by Cwens and Omicron Delta Kappa and replacing the old Interfraternity Sing, is an effort on the part of these organizations to provide the campus with some form of competition in which independent men and women may participate, with the fraternities and sororities. It is an attempt by O. D. K. to prove to the University student body that it is not exclusively an interfraternity organization.

It was hoped by the sponsoring of the All-Campus Sing that greater interest concerning what is considered a most important campus function in other universities, would be created at Kentucky. As yet, little, if any interest toward the contest has been shown by the independent men. There is no excuse for this poor spirit. It is probable that if independents were not allowed to enter the annual affair many complaints would be made, and now that independent competitions is invited what is the result? Profound disinterest!

The committee in charge has arranged for coaches for each entering team, the number of persons to a team has been reduced so that a more presentable performance can be given and any handicap due to lack of talent may be overcome. The independent groups, it may be granted, have more material from which to choose than the fraternities or sororities and their selections are more numerous and varied in musical requirements. Could more favorable odds be given them?

It is also true that the fraternities have not shown the proper interest in the sings of the past for which also there is no excuse. When reading of the delightful and highly interesting sings given on other campuses, every student is pleased and usually makes the remark that he wished such a program could be given at U. K. Such a program CAN be given if all will cooperate. Attend the All-Campus Sing—even though you are not a member of one of the competing teams. The program will prove more interesting than you think and anticipate. With a little effort on the part of the independents and all entering teams, an important and popular campus event can be established which will be another link in the chain of pleasant diversions which we, as students, are constantly striving to improve upon.

CAVALRY

The University of Kentucky, scholastically and athletically, has carried the name of Lexington and Kentucky through the broad expanse of the United States; as has the horse breeding industry of Kentucky.

Situated as it is in the heart of the thoroughbred industry the University of Kentucky could have an excellent cavalry unit training corps. The Kentucky thoroughbred breeders annually are giving the government many valuable horses for cavalry and breeding purposes, and the same donors probably would do likewise for the University.

It is the plan of Major Brewer, Kentucky Commandant, to establish a cavalry arm at the University in the near future. But he needs the cooperation of the student body and interested Lexingtonians to put this proposal before the higher officials.

Major Brewer is unselfish in his striving toward this goal. He knows that the establishment of such a unit at the University probably would mean a reduction in his staff of infantry training personnel.

A paragraph taken from Student Opinion in Friday's Kernel adequately explains the great opportunity in this proposal. It is indeed the "chance of a life time" for the University which we so proudly call our own. The paragraph follows:

"An opportunity has presented itself in the form of a possible R. O. T. C. Cavalry unit at the University—an opportunity for the University to have something of which the horse-lovers of the state may be justly proud."

BORAH—CONSISTENT IN INCONSISTENCY

By ROBERT E. FRENCH
(A. C. E. "Horizon")

A publisher, a priest, an ex-cowboy and two Senators set out to defeat the World Court, and included in this victorious company was William E. Borah, of Boise, Idaho. The vote (52-36) to keep the United States "out of foreign entanglements" permitted the Great Contradictor to utter a fervid, "Thank God," but within a few days he was requesting a senatorial investigation of religious persecution in Mexico.

This inconsistency has been Borah's consistent role for over 25 years as a national figure. When one considers that his favorite authors are Balzac and Hawthorne, that he believes Thomas Jefferson "the greatest political philosopher in all the history of the world" and Alexander Hamilton "one of the most powerful intellects in the history of governments," Borah's star part is not surprising. To attempt to reconcile the political creeds of Jefferson and Hamilton into a philosophy of thought and action is, perhaps, inconsistent from the beginning.

But Borah's nature is partly the cause of this weakness, which is also a virtue. Scrupulously honest—he gave up his law and business connections when he went to the Senate—and a true independent, he follows his own ideas, often blindly, regardless of their political implications. He burns the midnight oil studying history and politics. He is the Constitution's protector, and this has made him a dangerous doctrinaire when a loose interpretation of that document might be best for the country as a whole. He is against bonus payments and a high tariff.

On the Senate floor his oratorical skill is the delight of visitors and the envy of colleagues. In debate he is never guilty of invective and at times his opposition to a bill disclose a weakness otherwise lost in a general approval of the measure. Among newspapermen he is a favorite; for Borah will speak on any subject, at times with insight, at other times to air an opinion. For this reason, perhaps, he is the best known American Congressman to Europeans.

During the Roosevelt administration Borah has had much to defend and much to attack. The Constitution is, to him, the supreme achievement and the final authority in settling the right of the government in aiding the farmer or curtailing production, both administrative measures opposed by Borah. A New Dealer for years, Borah toured the country last summer in an attack on NRA, the screen behind which monopolies—he hates the corporation—were slowly driving the "little man" out of business. He has fought for economy in government, vehemently opposing the rise of bureaucracy in Washington. Liberal, or just stubborn, he backed the Liberty League as a means of preserving economic freedom.

This bulging bundle of inconsistencies, with the broad brow, stern eyes, cleft chin and this firm lips is a shrewd politician who may account for the chameleonlike character of his political cloak. No leader, unable to organize or cooperate, he plays a lone hand, which may result in his defending the present administration today and attacking it tomorrow. But his eloquence and his ready response for copy have made him a national figure. When the Chair recognizes the senior Senator from Idaho, senators hurry from cloak-rooms and visitors and correspondents in the galleries lean forward expectantly.

In a voice somewhat more mellow than formerly, the lion of Idaho—he once nearly joined a Shakespearean troupe—thunders out his soliloquy in the greatest deliberative body in the world, certain that no bit player will steal his spotlight. In his office in the Senate Building or in the dingy room in Boise he is a personality, if not a great figure, in American politics.

A Letter

Editor of THE KENTUCKY KERNEL:

Quoting from Student Opinion, Kernel, March 15, appears the statement, "But have we ever heard the University of Kentucky mentioned in connection with horses It exists apparently unconnected with this strong outstanding characteristic of the State." This statement is on all fours with other comments made now and then by persons who do not know the varied and extensive connections of the University.

The fact is that the outstanding man in this country in the field of veterinary medicine is a member of the University staff. Through the research of Dr. W. W. Dimmock and his colleagues the thoroughbred industry in this and other states has been benefited immeasurably. I am sure the horse-men of the State would agree to this.

The University is not a show place; it is not a riding school, but it does a lot of fundamental work of great importance, not only for breeders of horses, but for many of the important industrial and professional groups.

My great regret is that the students do not know the many things the University of Kentucky does.

Sincerely
Frank L. McVey

"Colleges studying wild life"—headline. We always thought most of 'em were majoring in it.

According to a contemporary, working in a hospital must be the nerse.

We just can't keep it a secret any longer. Our pet ambition has always been to attend a college like the ones in the movies.

Once again that woman failed to show up. . . . Once again we have been asked by Sunny Day to make another of our feeble attempts to write something with nothing in mind. . . . An investigation reveals that during the Phitau hell week the boys were instructed to trace a series of tin cans that had been planted around Fayette county. . . . They were allotted a certain time to do the job. . . . Four hours we think. . . . Brother Taylor drives to the destination of the can trail and there he sat and sat. . . . a bad cold overtook him. . . . Campus Cat Gets Solitary Lockup By Irate Janitor

Released after two days of solitary confinement in a janitor's closet, Ophelia, a brown feline inhabitant of the Buildings and Grounds department, today lapped contentedly on a saucer of milk, and deplored the injustice of this cruel world.

Fleeing Monday morning from a hotly pursuing janitor, Ophelia tried to conceal herself in the closet. Discovering Ophelia several minutes later, the janitor attempted to take the indignant feline tenderly to his bosom. Ophelia, however, had different ideas on the subject and promptly administered a healthy scratch to the well-meaning janitor. Apparently unused to such treatment from cats, the janitor slammed the closet door and locked it.

Today the closet door was unlocked, and Ophelia emerged apparently none the worse for her two days of solitude, and is once again a citizen in good standing.

The moral of the story seems to be: Don't attempt to take an indignant cat tenderly to your bosom.

Funkhouser Heard At Y.M.C.A. Dinner

Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, dean of the Graduate school, was the guest speaker at the monthly membership dinner of the University Y. M. C. A. at the Maxwell Presbyterian church last Tuesday night at 6 o'clock.

Doctor Funkhouser showed a moving picture that he took during his African trip and explained the various scenes as the picture progressed. In his reels of pictures, Doctor Funkhouser has a 'shot' of Victoria Falls. These falls, which are on the course of the Zambesi river, are very hard to reach and even harder to photograph.

The dinner was presided over by Julian Cox, chairman of the Y. M. C. A. committee on arrangement, who acted as toastmaster. The dinner was delightfully served by the ladies of the church and the ladies auxiliary of the University Y. W. C. A.

University of Akron (Ohio) officials have sanctioned smoking outside of campus buildings.

The hands of the clock are slowly coming together.

Snipping off another day.

A hazy smoke curls 'round the "No Smoking" sign.

Defiance is evident in every way.

Lines go slow,
Cues are horrid.
The lights are blurred
And the atmosphere torrid
The juvenile repeatedly
Yawns in his sleep,
While loves prepare
To take the final leap.
Frank tears his hair
As the mother's tongue errors.
Everyone seems to be
Full of opening night terrors.
Then slowly but thankfully
The last lines slip by.
And I wake from my daze
With an unknowing sigh.
Curtain!

A Freshman's Sonnet

I enter college with an inward hope.
To me, it seems, I start my life anew.
I see hardship with which I must cope.
Will failure, or will glad success ensue?
I cannot know, as yet, the last decree.
And glad I am that this is ever true;
Because, if bad, I can't fear till I see;
If good, I'm sure my joy will then be new.
I hope that, while I'm here at U of K,
The goal I seek will every hour near;
That, when I reach the last commencement day,
Achievement will have marked my whole career.
I know that hope alone will not suffice,
So I'll to work, for labor is the price.

Glimpses

I remember other nights like these;
Wet and shining snatches of time,
When young rain fell, tearing through thin air,
Exploding on walks and roofs;
dampening the earth
and turning streets into black mirrors:

Reflectors of passers by.
Gleaming winter fires—
Haunting faces and lulling music
Caught together in a mellowed web of time.

With young, strong bodies that challenge age
And scorn hypocrisy!
Loving too well—
Not wisely!

I remember another night like this.
A cold, clear moment we caught and held—
Clutching to retain it, knowing all the while
It must encircle our fingers and rise

Far from our eager grasp!
Futilely we watched it disappear.
Awakening, then, we realize
That moment gone—holds nothing
for us,
When, disillusioned, we view the folly—
Loving too well—not wisely,
You and I.

The Radio Announcer Becomes A Reporter

It is eight o'clock, ladies and gentlemen. The gong has just sounded. Dannie Doe has just come out of his home and is entering his swell 1935 model Airholed Plymouth. What a car and what a man! The Plymouth is purring very affectionately and it won't be long until the take off. And what a day it is for everybody. Really and truly a . . . Dannie Doe is off. That was a perfect start if there ever was one. A sudden spurge and Dannie Doe is racing madly down the thickly trafficked highway. There's a green light in the distance. It seems that luck is with Dannie. No. The light is changing. It has changed from green to orange. The light will be red in just a moment. It looks as if Dannie is going to try to beat the red light. Yes. He is. He's racing across. The light is now red. It looks as if he will make it. Yes. He's making it. No he isn't. A large street car is closing in fast from the right. It looks bad for Dannie. Yes. It's going to be a crash. Dannie has just gone through the wind shield. He is now sprawled out in the road. Everyone is running to and fro. Here comes the cop. Dannie has not yet moved. It looks as if he is out. The cop is examining Dannie. Here comes the ambulance. The cop and the ambulance men are in a huddle over Dannie. Yes. Dannie is declared decidedly out. And the final score, ladies and gentlemen, is Street Car 1, Dannie Doe 0.

As a result of experience in making these interviews, many students have obtained positions in advertising research departments and several psychologists have found openings in this field which is rapidly developing.

Professor Miner, head of the psychology department, and a member of the board of Directors of the Psychological Corporation, stated that the object of this organization is to make the cooperative services of psychologists and their techniques available for business and personal problems.

NEW PLANS LAID FOR FINAL WEEK

Series of Extra Dances for June Graduation Exercises Is Being Considered

FAMOUS BAND TO PLAY

Plans for having a set of final dances during Commencement week, of which the Senior Ball would be one, are being worked on by an Interfraternity Council committee composed of Walter Hunt, Elvis Stahr, and Henry McCown.

A number of novel and practical ideas are under consideration for making graduation a more outstanding and memorable occasion on the Kentucky campus by having at least two evenings and one afternoon of dancing to the music of one of the nation's leading orchestras.

The Council expressed its approval of the committee's initial report at a regular meeting at the Triangle house Monday night. Jimmy Carroll reported that Doctor McVey had been spoken to in regard to the excessive costs of obtaining the Alumni gym for dances, and that he had agreed to look into the matter. Hunt reported that the Council had obtained Dean Jones' approval in the matter of applying part of the money from the Wednesday night gym dances, which begin next week, toward the purchase of a new piano for the gym, which he said was sadly needed. The Building and Grounds department has agreed to build a special room for the protection of the piano.

"Romeo and Juliet" Opens at Guignol

(Continued From Page One) he drinks a vial of deadly poison which he had secured from an apothecary and dies at Juliet's feet. Juliet, awaking from her deep sleep, spies Romeo dead and stabs herself. The Friar soon discovers them and calls the two families together at the tomb, where a reconciliation is effected.

As Romeo, Frank Fowler, although somewhat older and more mature than one imagines the dashing, gallant Romeo to be, turns in a finished performance.

Doubtless, the most natural of the characters is Marjorie Powell, whose superb portrayal of Juliet, both in beauty and speech, makes this famous character beloved to all.

Several of the less important characters came near "stealing the show." Dorothy Dyer Rodes as Juliet's nurse, and Frank Willis as the comical, yawning servant to the Capulets, leave nothing to be desired in the way of cleverness. Frederick de Wilde as Mercutio and Leonard Van Arsdale as Benvolio give to their parts excellent spirit and surprising finesse. George White Pithian as the Friar is very convincing. Paul Mansfield and Mrs. H. C. Robinson as Lord and Lady Capulet give finished portrayals. Marianna Lancaster as both Rosaline and Lady Montague, Russell Schofield as Paris, J. D. Haggard as Montague, and Ollie Williamson as both Tybalt and the Apothecary, do justice to their parts and serve to carry out the general naturalness which distinguishes the play.

The play is produced under the supervision of Mrs. Lolo Robinson, with Malcolm Shottwell in charge of the stage, and Mildred Shaffner in charge of costuming.

U. K. CANCELS GENERALS' GAME

Athletic Relations Are Only Temporarily Severed Between Teams

MARYVILLE IS CARDED

By mutual agreement of authorities of both institutions, the football game between the University Wildcats and the Washington and Lee Generals, tentatively scheduled for September 22, at Lexington, Va., has been called off, according to a statement Friday by Coach Chet Wynne, Wildcat grid mentor.

The announcement of the canceling of this year's gridiron tussle does not mean that athletic relations between the two schools is definitely ended. Beginning in 1936 the teams will enter on a three-year contract, the first game to be played in Lexington, Va., and the next two to be played here.

In place of the Generals the Wildcats will meet Maryville College, a team that has filled the opening date on the Kentucky grid card for many years. This completes the football schedule for next fall with the exception of October 26, a date which in all probability will be left open.

ment of a Cub from one rank to another.

A pageant depicting the high spots in scouting in the last 25 years, starting with the bringing of the Scout movement to America and ending with the silver jubilee in 1935, was directed by A. E. Oram, Scout field commissioner. The fifth event was a dressing relay, full of fun from start to finish.

A presentation of awards followed, with James M. Todd, vice-president of the Blue Grass council, presenting civic service medals, C. W. Sulter awarding first class badges, Dr. Frank McFarland, Dean Alvin E. Evans, and Professor L. J. Horlacher presenting the star awards, life awards, and eagle awards respectively.

Miss Ruthenburg Is Guest Speaker

Miss Grace Dorcas Ruthenburg, well known playwright, was the guest speaker on the campus last week, addressing several organizations among which were the A. A. U. W. at Maxwell Place; the Campus Club, Contemporary Club, Cwens, and Theta Sigma Phi.

Miss Ruthenburg read a three act play, "Afternoon," which she hopes to have produced on Broadway this coming winter season. The play itself is a radical change from the sophisticated plays first-nighters are accustomed to seeing, having its setting in an old woman's home. It is rich in humor and full of character sketches.

In addition to the play, Miss Ruthenburg read two one act Mariouette plays, a play entitled "Retreat", and also several poems.

...and back of Chesterfield there is more than 85 million dollars invested in mild ripe tobacco... for milder better taste

Because you cannot make a good cigarette from just one year's crop there are today 4 1/2 miles of warehouses filled with cigarette tobaccos from the crops of 1931-32-33-34—most of it for Chesterfield cigarettes.

Just as money accumulates interest, two and a half years of ageing makes these tobaccos milder and naturally sweeter.

Think what this means—an eighty-five million dollar reason why men and women who smoke Chesterfields will always enjoy a milder, better-tasting cigarette.
